

ABSTRACT

A method and system for retrieving data from a database comprising the steps of: accessing the database via a computer to retrieve data from the database; executing a data transforming program in the computer according to a user specific profile to create transformed view data; storing the transformed view data to a server in the computer with a URL address; and accessing and displaying the transformed data from the server via a pervasive device.